

Atwater-Donnelly at Free Family Performance in Marlborough on July 30

Marlborough, MA – Acclaimed husband and wife folk duo Atwater-Donnelly appear at Union Common, corner of Bolton and Main streets, Marlborough, July 30, at 11 a.m., for a free family-oriented performance.

Aubrey Atwater and Elwood Donnelly play guitar, Appalachian mountain dulcimer, mandolin, tin whistle, harmonica, banjo, bones, spoons, and limberjack, for a mix that includes traditional American, Appalachian, and Celtic music as well as the duo's own original compositions. With their musical talent, humor, audience participation, and relaxed stage presence, their shows appeal to all ages.

The Rhode Island couple has performed or shared festival billing with folk legends Jean Ritchie, Pete Seeger, and Doc Watson.

The Boston Globe's Scott Alarik praises "...harmonies so thick they seemed more than the sum of two voices," and Laura Travis of The Nicepaper in Providence, RI asks "How DO they get their voices to weave around each other's so nicely?"

The Saturday Morning Discovery Series is a series of free family performances hosted by the city of Marlborough and the Arts Alliance. Families can enjoy these outstanding programs free of charge thanks to generous sponsors, including Boston Scientific, the city of Marlborough, Digital Federal Credit Union, Ezra M. Cutting Trust, Hudson Savings Bank, Adcole Corporation, and Ken's Foods.

The rain location is the Walker Building's third-floor auditorium, 255 Main Street (elevator accessible from Prospect St.), Marlborough. For more information, visit www.atwater-donnelly.com or www.upwitharts.org, or call 978-xxx-xxxx.
